Matt Carr Joins Green Capitol

Green Capitol, LLC, a respected agriculture, environment and energy consultancy, announced today that Matt Carr has joined the firm as a director and principal.

Carr holds a PhD in atmospheric sciences from the University of Washington. He joins Green Capitol after five years as Executive Director of the Algae Biomass Organization and The Algae Foundation, and nine years as head of industrial and environmental section policy at the Biotechnology Innovation Organization.

“From farm bill to tax policy, research funding to regulatory issues, Matt has been a remarkably effective advocate for emerging technologies in climate change, clean energy, and sustainable ag” said Lloyd Ritter, Green Capitol founder and managing partner. “He has a proven track record of getting things done, and we are delighted he has joined the Green Capitol team.”

Carr’s policy wins include significant updates to agriculture policy in the 2019 Farm Bill to expand USDA support for algae; reform of the section 45Q tax credit for carbon capture to include biological and other non-geologic carbon capture, use and storage (CCUS) technologies; and establishment of the DOE Advanced Algal Systems research program.
